SUMMER

As the leaves turn fiery shades of red and gold, Seattle is transformed into a cozy haven for fall enthusiasts. Here are some must-do activities:

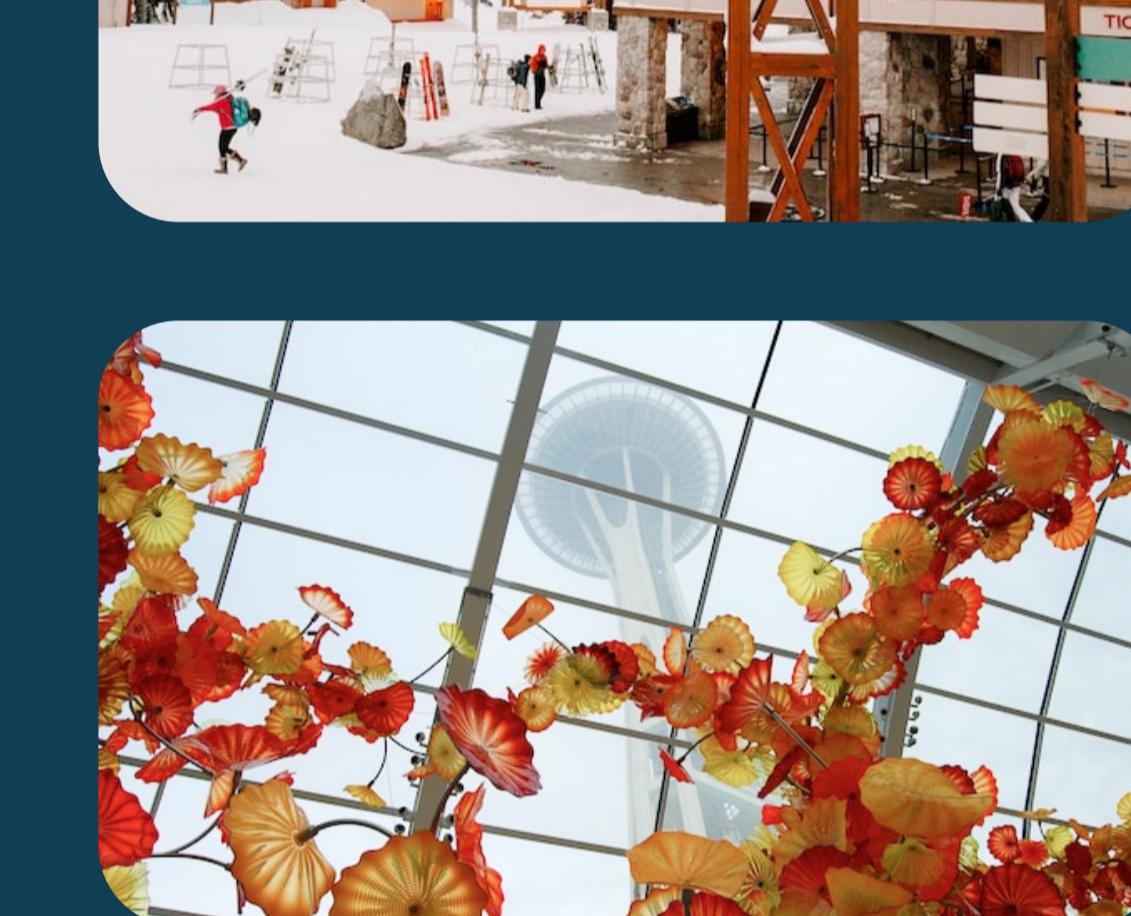

Fall Foliage at Discovery Park

Take a leisurely stroll through Discovery Park, where you can witness the breathtaking contrast of colorful leaves against the backdrop of Puget Sound and the Olympic Mountains.

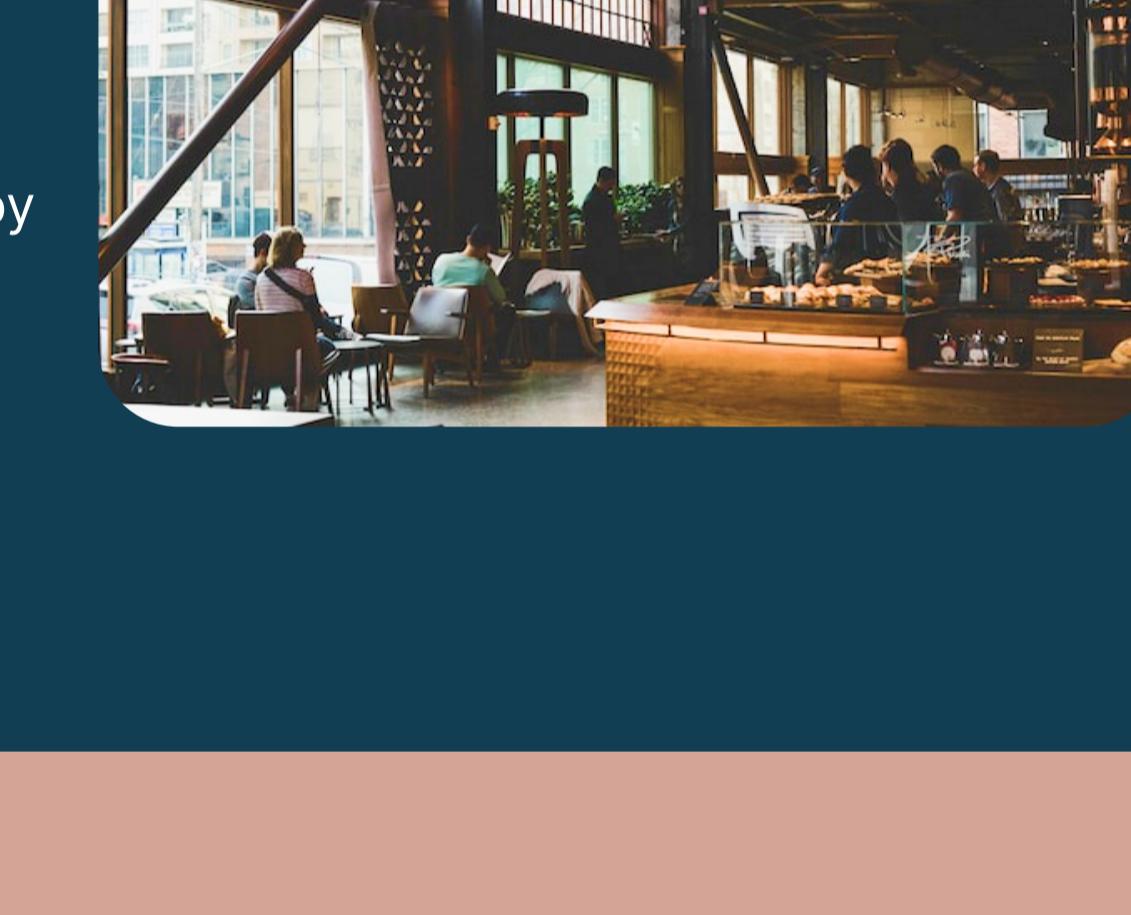

Pike Place Market

Explore the bustling market, where vendors showcase fall's bounty of fresh produce. Don't miss the apple cider and artisanal pumpkin treats.

Seattle Cider Tasting

Discover the city's craft cider scene with tastings at local cideries. Savor the unique flavors of the season, from spiced apple to cranberry-infused ciders.

SPRING
SUMMER

When winter arrives, Seattle becomes a magical wonderland with its blend of holiday cheer and Pacific Northwest charm. Here's what to do:

Snowy Adventures in the Cascades

Just a short drive from the city, you can ski or snowboard in the Cascade Mountains. Snoqualmie Pass offers excellent slopes for winter sports enthusiasts.

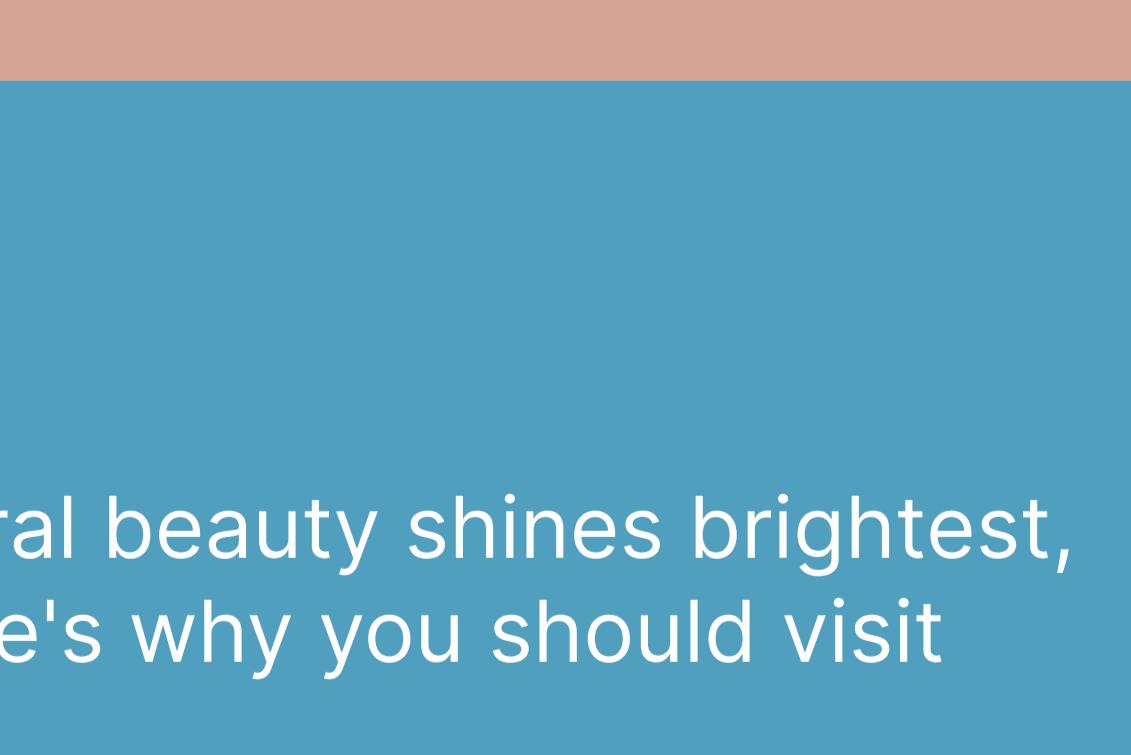

Chihuly Garden and Glass

Embrace the warmth of indoor artistry at the Chihuly Garden and Glass Museum in the Seattle Center. Explore a world of vibrant glass art, with the Glasshouse showcasing a breathtaking suspended sculpture.

Cozy Café Hopping

Warm up in Seattle's numerous cozy coffee shops and tea houses. Try unique blends, artisanal hot chocolates, and enjoy the comforting ambiance.

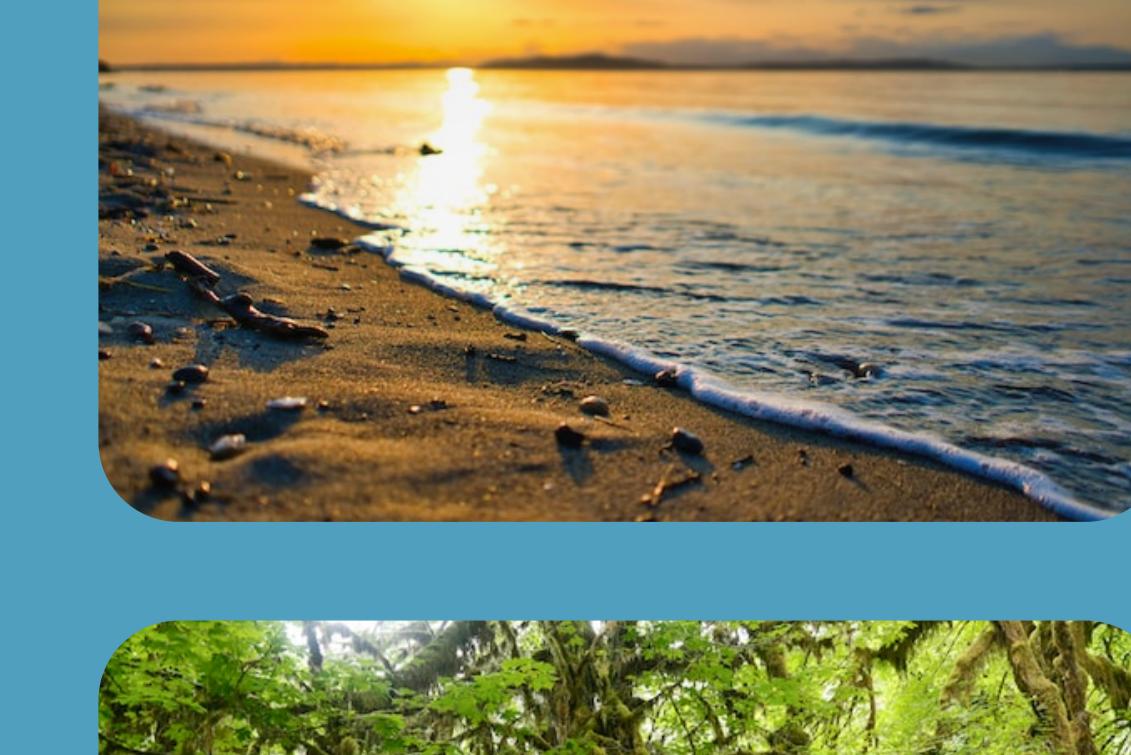

SPRING
SUMMER

As the city awakens from its winter slumber, Seattle bursts into bloom during springtime. Here's how to make the most of it:

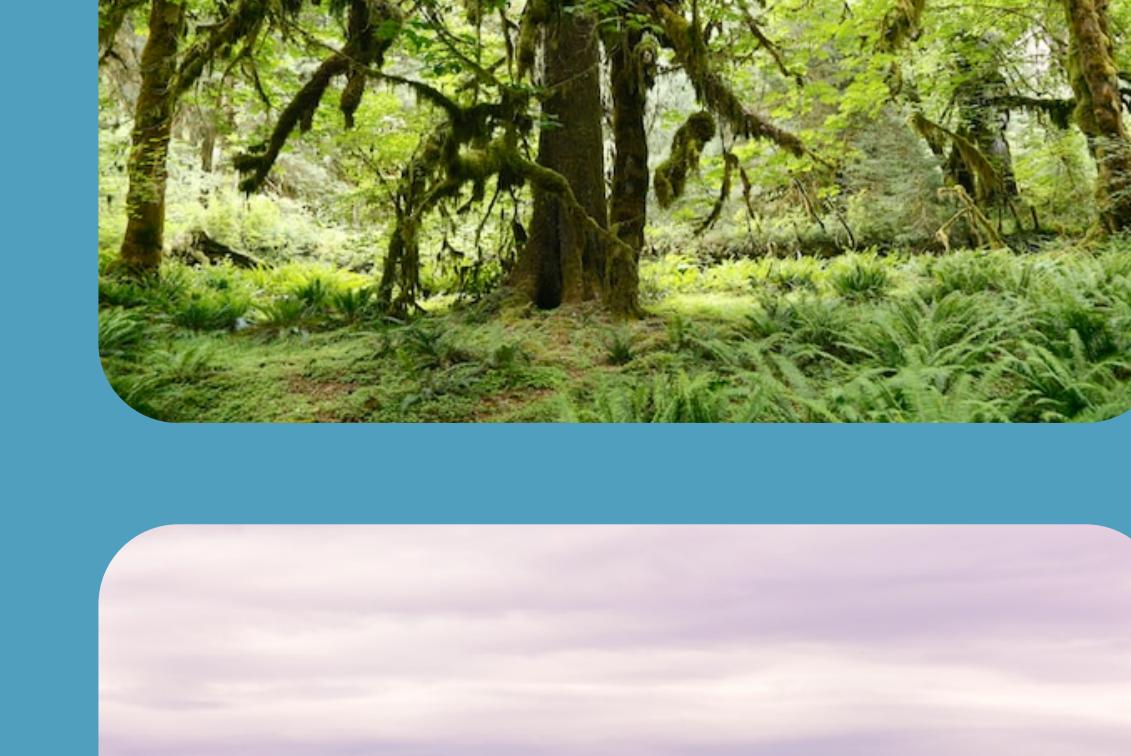

Cherry Blossom Viewing

Head to the University of Washington's Quad to witness the mesmerizing cherry blossoms in full bloom, a sight that rivals Japan's sakura season.

Mount Rainier

Explore the lush trails of Mount Rainier National Park as they start to thaw. The wildflower displays are a photographer's dream.

Boat Tour on Lake Washington

Enjoy a scenic boat tour on Lake Washington as the city's parks and waterfronts come alive with vibrant colors.

Alki Beach

Soak up the sun at Alki Beach, where you can swim, kayak, or simply relax on the sandy shore while taking in panoramic views of the city.

Olympic National Park

Summer hiking in Olympic National Park offers diverse landscapes, from lush rainforests to alpine meadows and rugged coastlines.

Ferry to the San Juan Islands

Take a ferry ride to the picturesque San Juan Islands, where you can spot whales, kayak in pristine waters, and explore charming island communities.
